

Extra Wireframes and Designs

Valorant Inspired Wireframe

Informational Bunny Website

Preparing

Bonding

Health Check

Shopping Lists

DIY

Resources

Support

All About Buns

Take care of your precious Bun

A informational website from a bunny owner with two Buns.
Learn the basics from collective resources of bunny care.

Read More

About Us

Full-time Bun Mom gathering Resources for you

A informational website from a bunny owner with two bunnies.
Learn the basics from collective resources of bunny care.

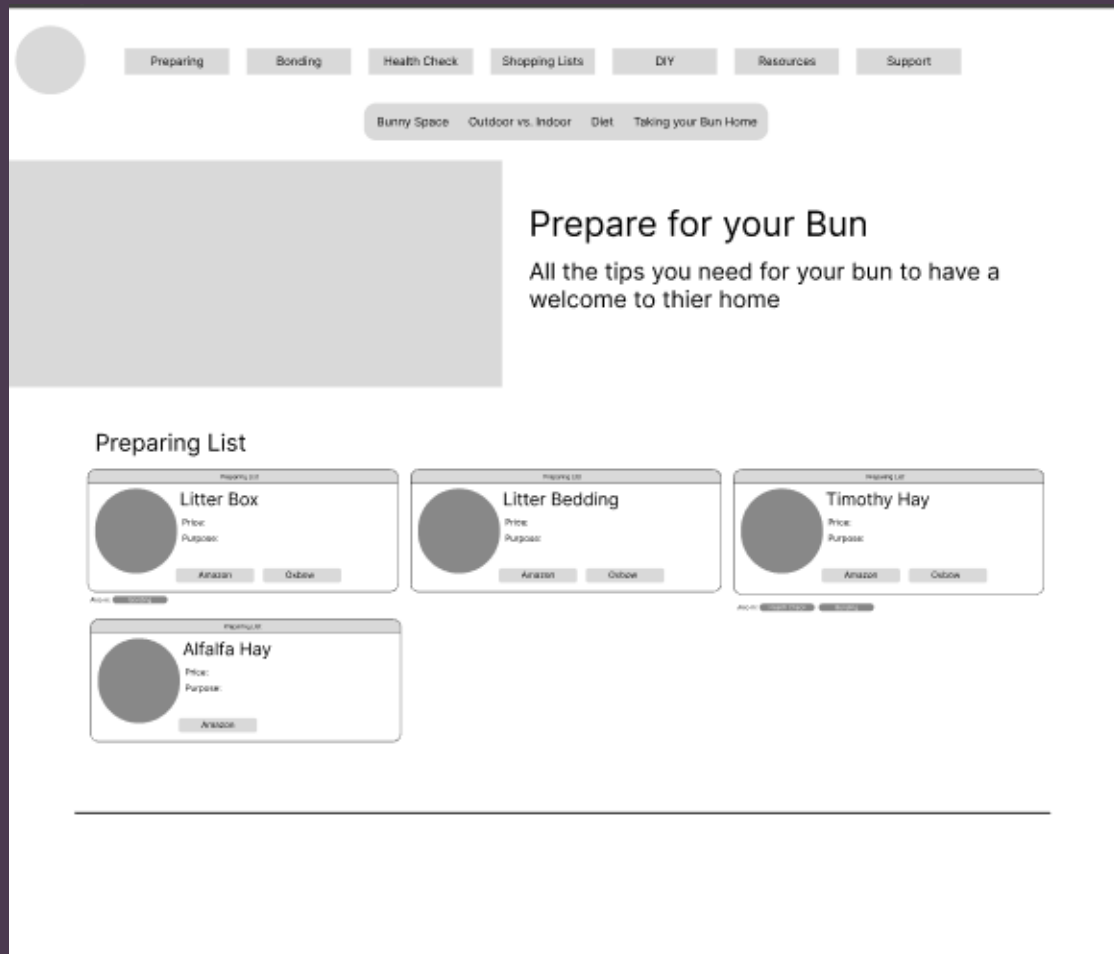

Share your feedback

All Topics Covered

Preparing	Bonding	Health Check	DIY
<ul style="list-style-type: none">Bunny SpaceOutdoor vs. IndoorTaking your Bun Home	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Why Bonding?Tips / TricksTo-Do ListCoaching	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Spay / NeuterPicking upPotty TrainingDietGI Statis	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Hay BoxToysOther

Click to navigate through the topics

Informational Bunny Website

Bunny Diet

Bunnies have sensitive tummys so it is important to know what foods to feed them! You also need to know when and how to feed them!

Alfalfa Hay

Before 6 months
Unlimited
Baby bunnies have high metabolism, so alfalfa helps them gain a healthy weight!

Timothy, Orchard, Or Brome Hay

Any age (After 6 months)
Unlimited
This is what makes up a bulk of their diet! Hay allows bunnies' keep a healthy digestive tract!

Alfalfa pellets

Before 6 months
Unlimited
Baby bunnies can have unlimited pellets, but I would make sure you feed them at a certain time, so they do not wean off their hay!

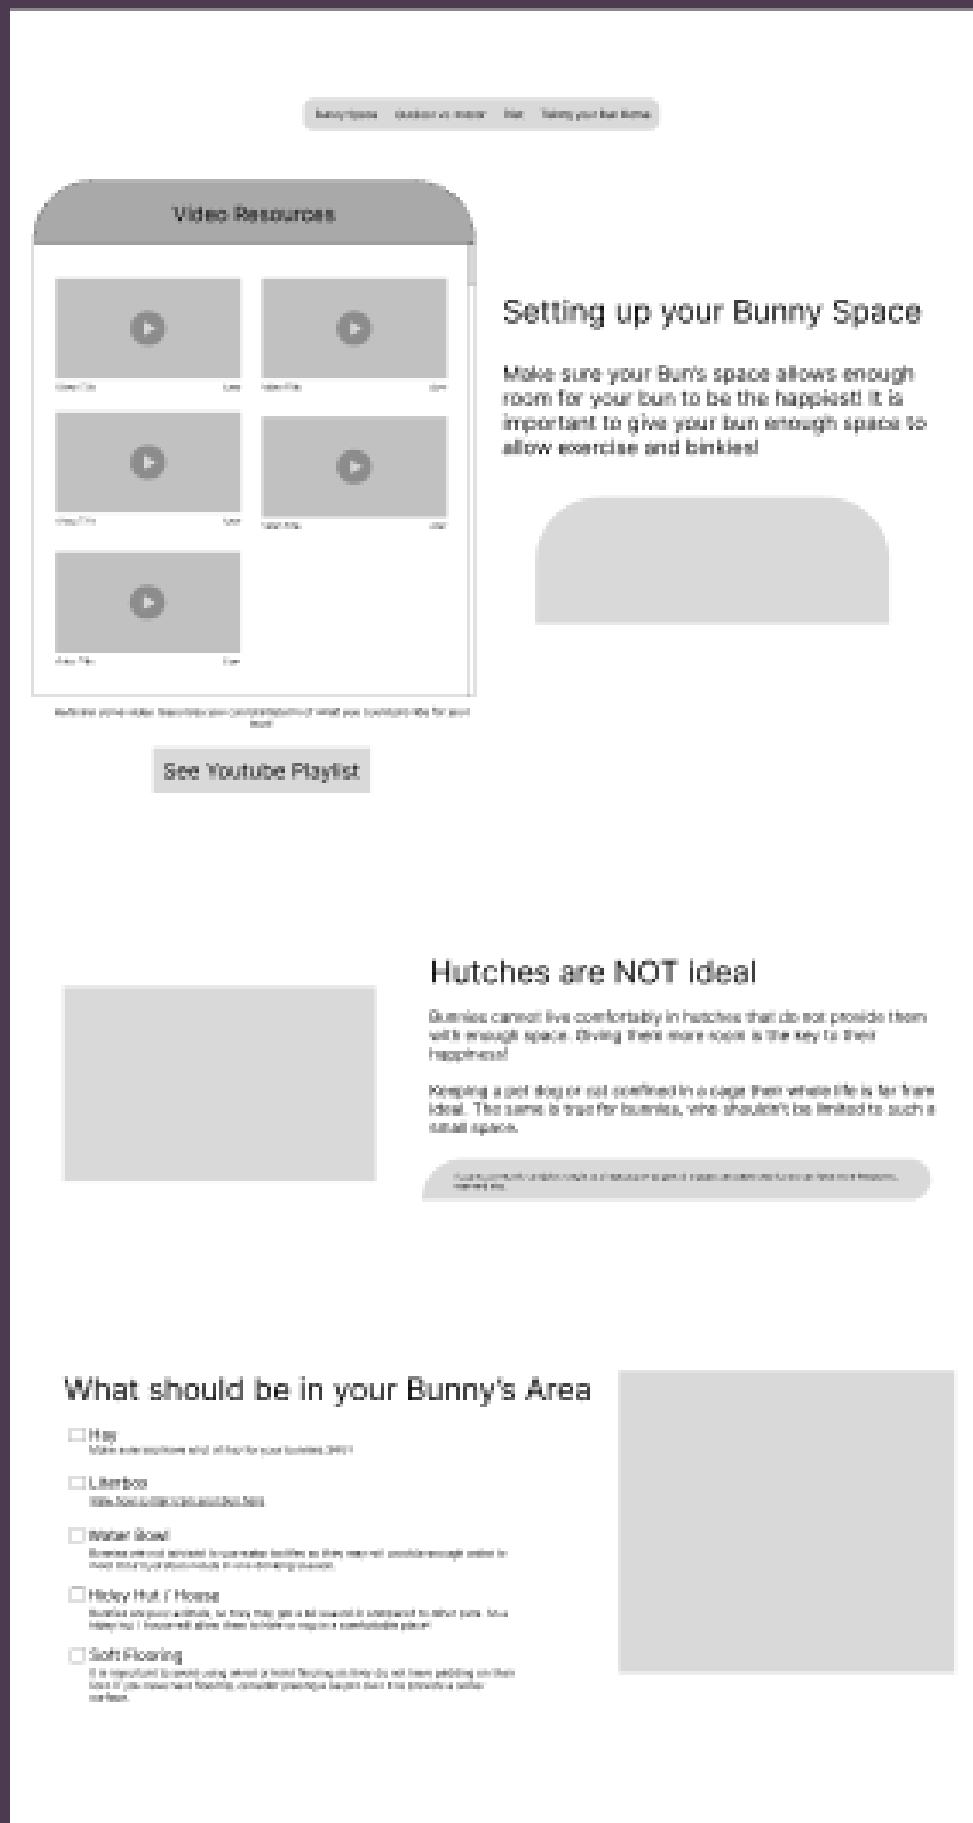

Alfalfa pellets

Before 1 year
Unlimited or (See chart)
A rabbit is considered an adult at 1 year. Once they have reached that age, pellets should be fed based on their weight.
Notes: This may not apply to underweight bunnies or disabled bunnies

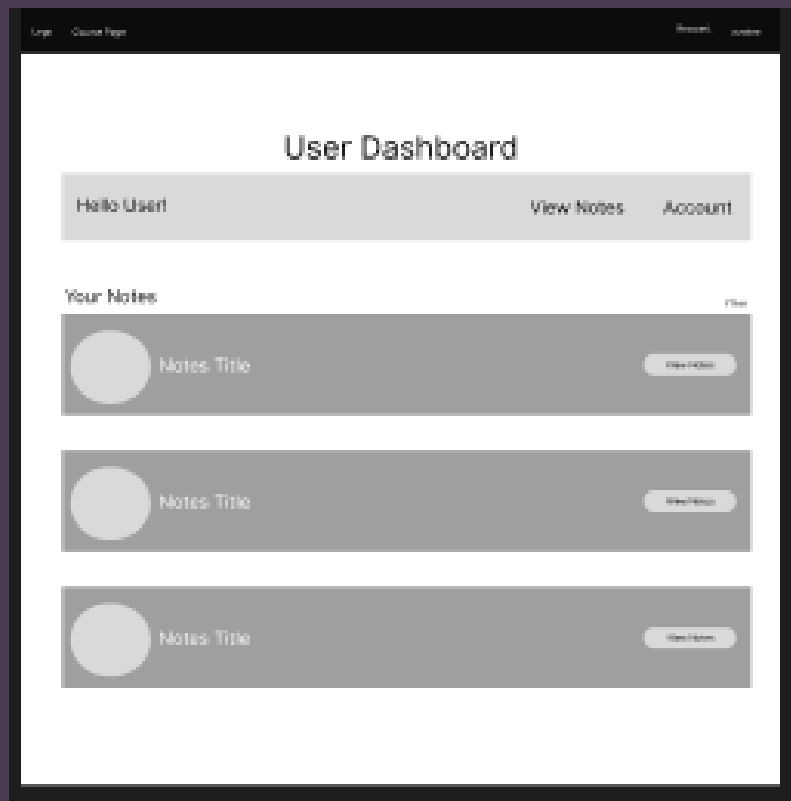

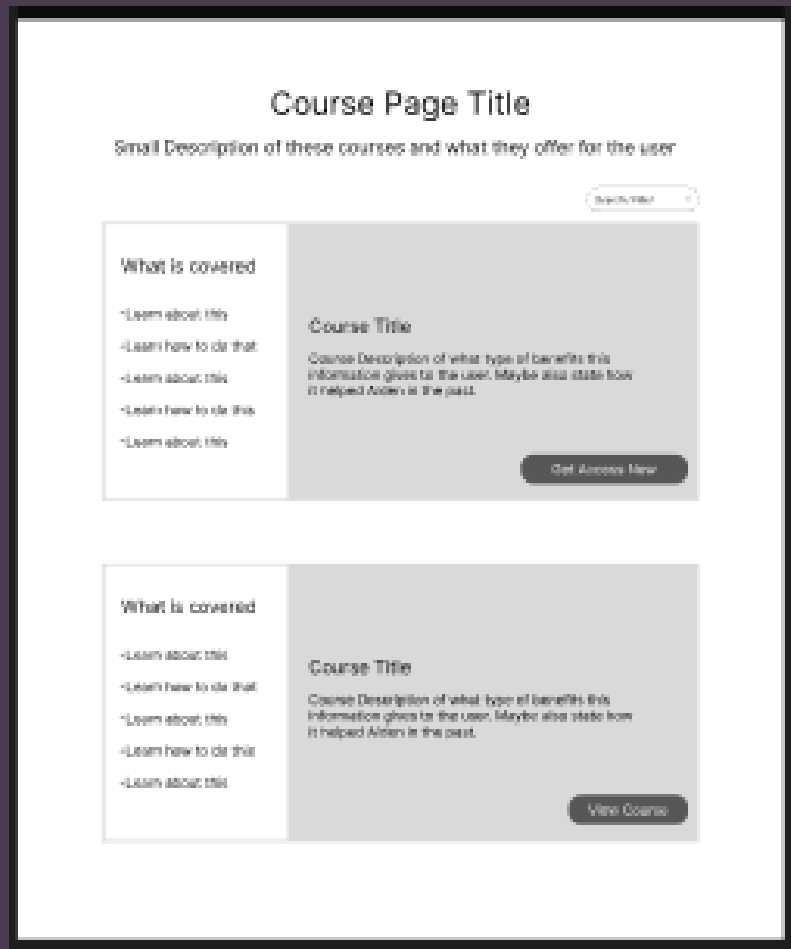

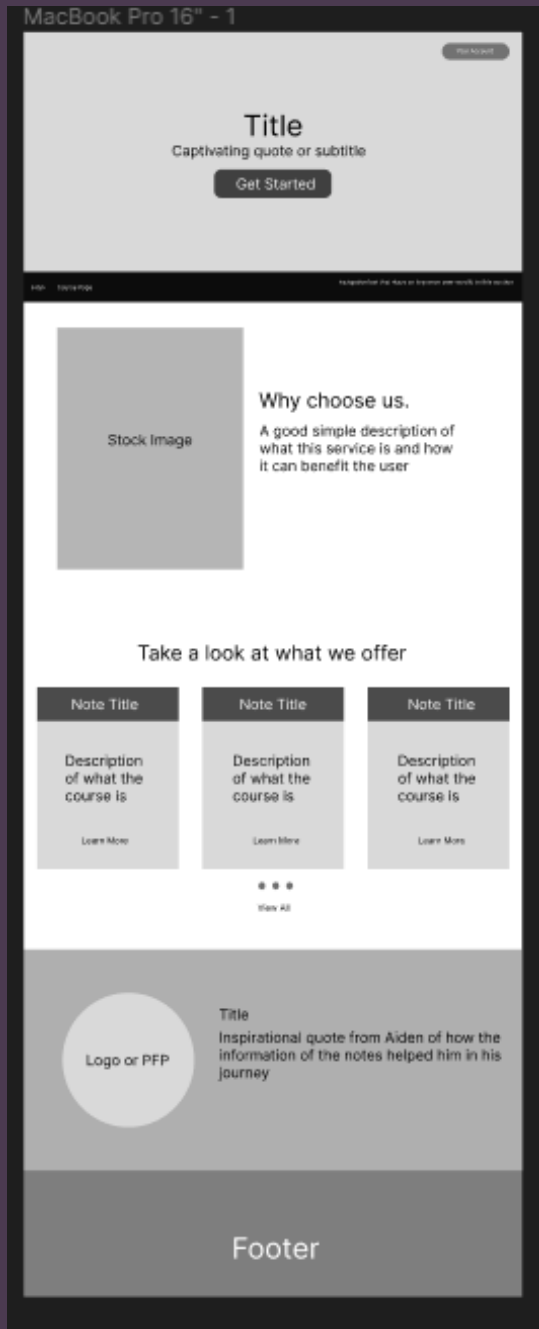

Timothy pellets

After 1 year
(See chart) Daily
A rabbit is considered an adult at 1 year. Once they have reached that age, pellets should be fed based on their weight.
Notes: This may not apply to underweight bunnies or disabled bunnies

Informational Bunny Website

Educational Website

Educational Website Design

