Resume Designs
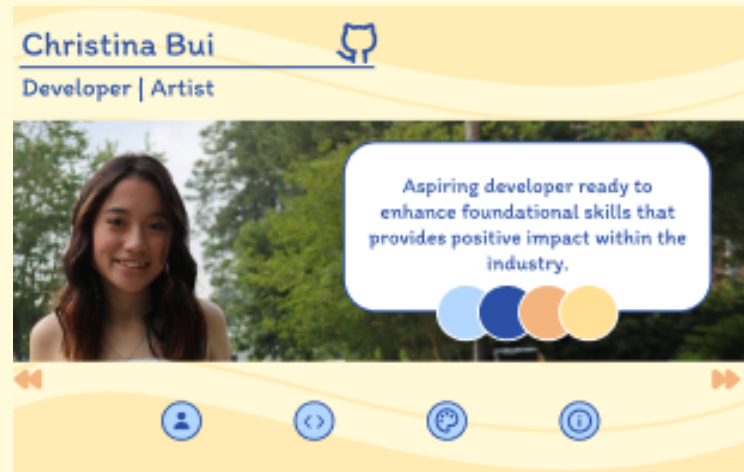

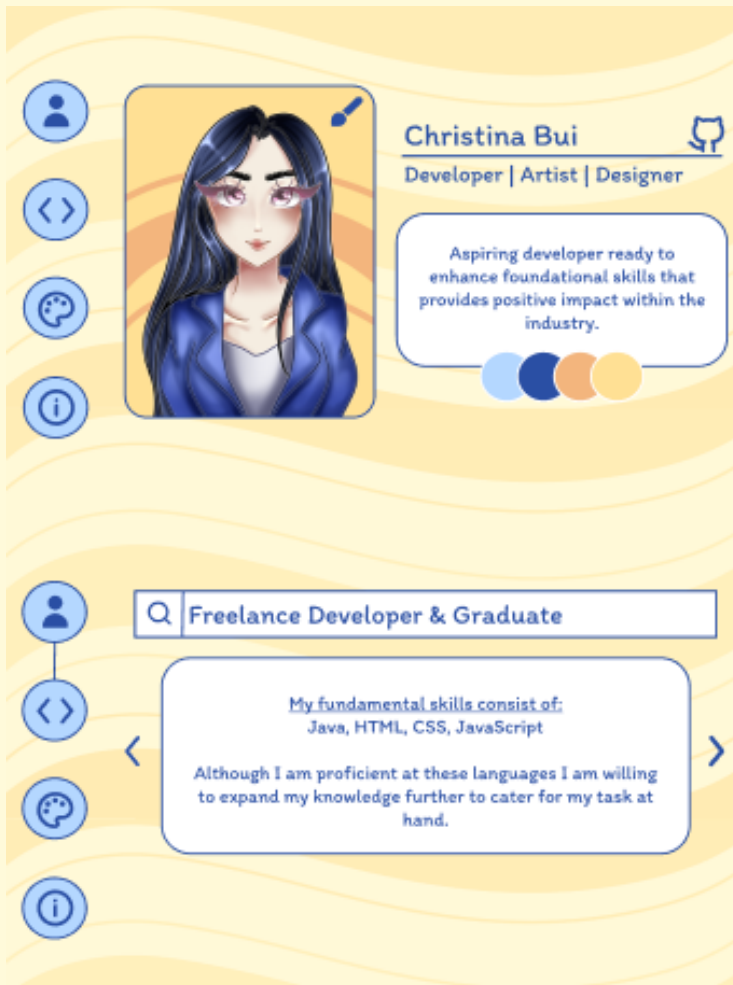

Past resume designs that represented my branding as a creative developer/designer
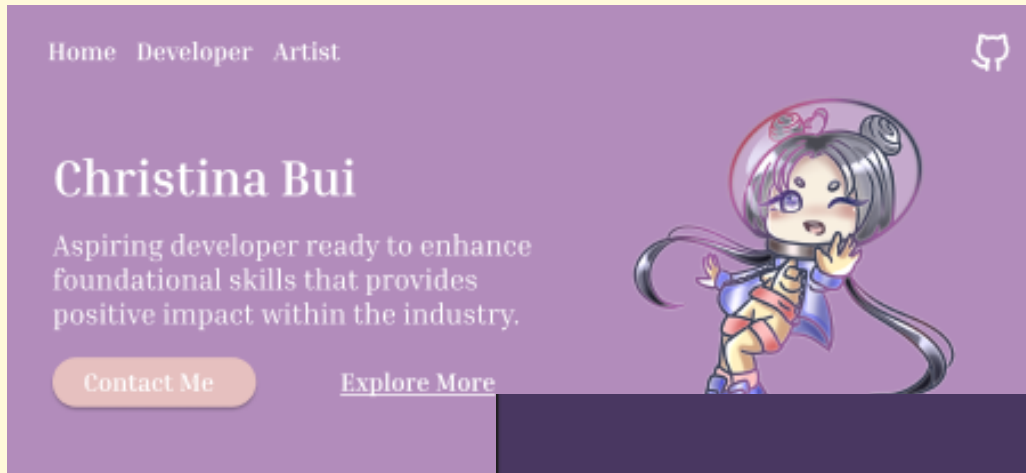

Iteration One

This was my first design for my resume. This was just a concept, as it never got implemented in development.
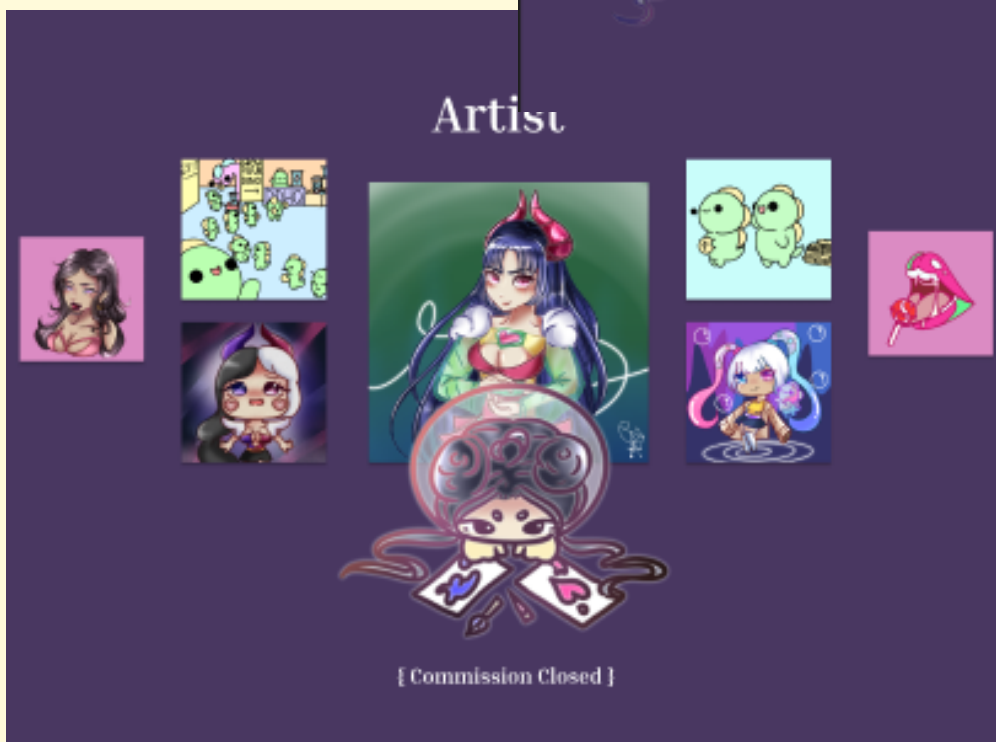

Iteration Two

This Design Concept also did not complete the development stage

Here I wanted to make a unique character that represented my website.

Home Developer Artist

Christina Bui

Aspiring developer ready to enhance foundational skills that provides positive impact within the industry.

Iteration Three

Homepage
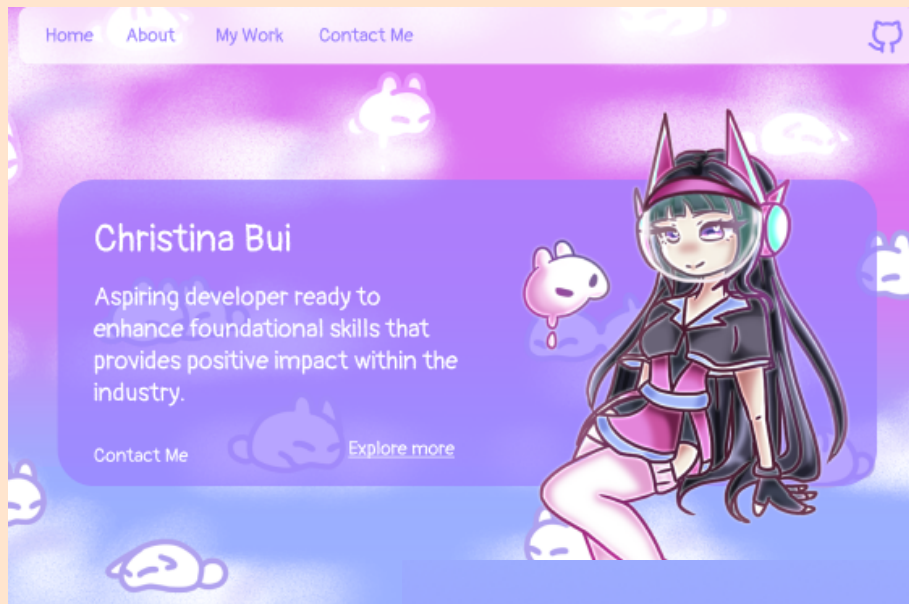

After the first iteration, I felt as though I could push myself with the design.

I rebranded the website character and want to go with a pastel theme

What do I need to consider?

- What information do I need to prioritize?
- How do I design with minimal content?
- How should I implement the application forms?

What information do I need to prioritize?

- ✓ Location
- ✓ Prices
- ✓ Form
- ✗ Policy
- ✗ FAQ

In order for me to get started with the foundation of the website, I have to consider what information I can have access to in a timely manner.

Since the start of the project was postponed due to lack of information, I had to work with the content that is most important to improve business clientele.

How do I design with minimal content?

Designing was tough having no current photographs, so I opt to using content posted on their Facebook.

Since they had a professional video, I used that as a focal point for users to seek the business.

The rest of the website was designed based on more of a "classy" look and feel.

Here I wanted to show the diversity in my skills, so I added an artist showcase of my artist capabilities.
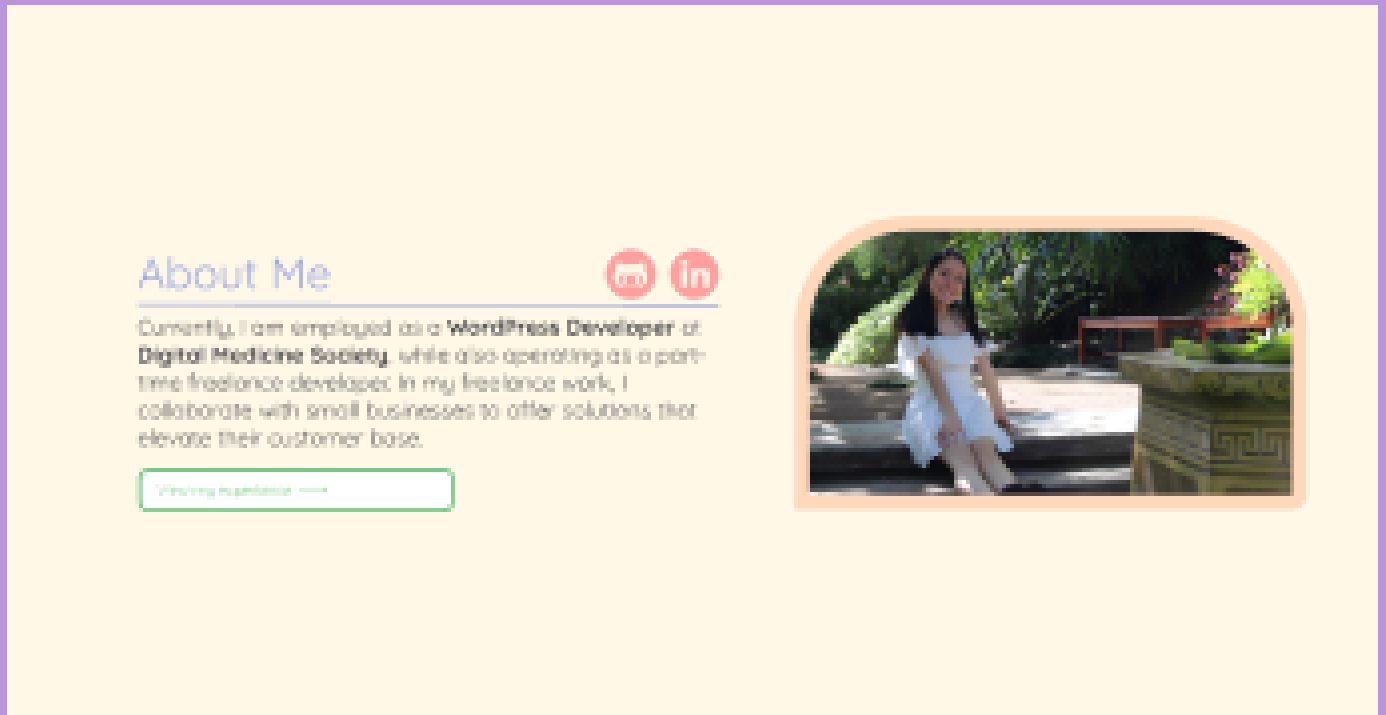

Iteration Four

Homepage

After I started working with DiMe (Digital Medicine Company), I decided that I wanted a more simple design. In this iteration, I implemented 3D art made from Spline for the first time. So each 3D component slowly rotates and can be moved around by the user.

Something unique I wanted to create was a cute mobile navigation bar! When the user clicks the carrot, they are "feeding" the bunnies to show on their screen!
